SAINTLILY Youth Association gets first ever training

By Daemon Salmon

A YOUTH ASSOCIATION IN APOROLILO village on Malo that brings together students who have dropped out of school, has recently been fortunate enough to benefit from the first ever management training course to be held in their area. The programme took place from October 21 to 25 and was facilitated by the Chamber of Commerce.

SAINTLILY Youth Association is a youth group comprised of school leavers which works to involve youths in different activities with the aim that they may come to realize their importance and value inside their communities. It is hoped that from there they may go on to perform valuable roles for their village, island, province, or at the national level.

The training programme was funded by the Australian TVET centre in collaboration with the Chamber of Commerce in Port Vila. Twenty nine participants attended the programme altogether.

President of the group, Tavui Toa, told the Daily Post that the youth group had been formed back in 2007 and this was one of the first ever training sessions to have been held in their area to help them with life skills. He said many of the attendees had small business ideas and this training would help them to improve their businesses.

"We will continue to remain solid within our group and will continue to work together to get more training courses in our area to help develop us. We believe that even though many of us have not benefited from the normal formal education system we keep our hopes alive, and know that in life there will always be success if we strive to achieve it," Toa said.

CD Pacific strengthening voices of the Pacific island states

Visiting the Pacific region last week and speaking at the USP Emaus Campus conference room on the 26th of October, 2013, was the Swiss Minister of Foreign Affairs, Didier Burkhalter, who confirmed Switzerland's determination to foster small island states' presence in Geneva.

This will be achieved through CD Pacific, an online and in situ multilateral diplomacy capacity development programme, implemented by the Geneva-based diploma Foundation.

Geneva, being the second largest in the UN and home of many NGOs, think-tanks and other international actors, has proven to be the place where solutions to many international problems are found and where negotiations are internationally adopted, be they concerned with environmental issues, health, trade, migration, human rights or humanitarian action and so on.

Every day, issues are discussed in Geneva that may have a direct impact on the populations of this country as well as the whole of the south Pacific region, said Federal Councillor Didier Burkhalter during the launch of CD Pacific - the capacity development programme for multilateral diplomacy for Pacific Island states.

This project - custom designed using Diplo Foundation's online training expertise, will strengthen the participation of Pacific island states in multilateral organisations.

Prime Minister Moana Carcasses stressed its importance, saying that "for our small island, like the rest of the Pacific, this type of capacity building development is essential. We cannot afford to be left out of global negotiations. Yes, we are small island states, but we share global problems. Many of the issues that are of relevance to us are discussed in Geneva. Climate change is for us a matter of survival. We are often hit by humanitarian disasters. Geneva is the world, humanitarian capital, with the headquarters of the Red Cross, the United Nations High Commission for Refugees and several other major organisations."

"Interpersonal communication is vital for our ability to stay in touch with the rest of the world. For us, participation in these processes is not only a matter of necessity, but also of urgency."

Diplomacy is also mentioned that he would discuss the importance of opening permanent missions in Geneva with his counterparts from other Pacific Islands.

Participating remotely through video-conferencing, Diplomation Foundation director Jonas Riebeling explained the three phases of the CD Pacific approach - online training, off-line policy research and policy immersion.

The online course (http://www.diplofoundation/capacity/pacific) will be launched in January and face-to-face policy immersion will take place in Geneva in May 2014.

The Diplo Foundation is an independent non-profit organisation established in 2002 by the governments of Switzerland and Malta. Diplomacy's mission is to increase the capacity of small and developing states to engage effectively and efficiently in global policy processes, negotiations and diplomacy.

The local coordinator for the launch of the CD Pacific, Ms Dalila Baniala, acknowledged the audience at the important dignitaries who attended and witnessed the event.
